Last year my primary goal was to expand experiential learning among our T(i)-8.9 8 ()-1M206gt1L7 (IT(i)-8.9Tw 3.614 this with our trip to Nepal over Spring Break. While one student was injured by a Yeti on the journey, it must be noted that it was at least in part the fault of the student for having bacon at breakfast. Everyone else seemed to enjoy the trip immensely and were able to produce a host of scholarly reports and posters. The trip even succeeded in converting two students over to Xenobiology majors.

I taught two sections of introduction to mythical beasts in both the fall and spring terms. I also created and offered an entirely new course XENO 322: Non-Human Linguistics in the spring and an additional senior seminar, XENO 499: In the Steps of Bigfoot. My student evaluations were phenomenal, except for the one student bit by a yeti during field work. I continue to refine both laboratory, field, and classroom aspects of my courses based on new and innovative pedagogy provided by the CETL. I will complete OCDP next semester and my XENO 111: Mythical Beasts will be offered online.
